THE FREEBOOTER VASOUEZ.

A Long Pursuit Ends in His Final Cap-ture—Tracked to a House, Riddled with Bullets, but Still Alive. The telegraph has already announced the capare of Vasquez, the Mexican leader of a band of robbers, who for many months has been the terror of California by frequent "swoops" down on villages, which they pillaged and then hied sway to the mountains. Several thousand dollars' ward has been a standing bid for his capture, and although he has several times narrowly es aped armed forces sent out, he was, on the 14th inst., taken prisoner near Los Angeles. A correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle, who was one of the capturers, under Deputy Sheriff Ionnson, describes

THE VASQUEZ HUNT. The party, numbering seven armed men, left Los Angeles secretly, sending their horses to a point in the suburbs, where, armed with Henry rifles, revolvers and shot guns, they centred from point in the suburbs, where, armed with Henry rides, revolvers and shot guns, they centred from different routes. The correspondent writes:—

We crossed the plains, eight miles, to the Aliso Canyon in the Cujunga range.

Recently have been at the house of "Greek George," a Mexican of bad repute, about a half-mile from the mouth of the canyon. Arriving at a point near Greek George's, we halted, removed our spurs and took other precautions arainst the barking of dogs, and reached the spot chosen by our leaders for a camping ground, a little way up the canyon, without giving indications to the enemy of our presence. Mitchell, Johnson, Sam Bryant and D. K. Smith left us there, and proceeded to a point on the mountain side commanding a view of the whole valley, and, crawling through the chaparral from point to point, occupled the time until ten o'clock in subversing the chaparral from point to point, occupled the time until ten o'clock in subversing the order of the description of Vasquez, iode a white horse into a little namilet about a mile and a half from Greek George's. About ten o'clock a Mexican, answering to the description of Vasquez, led a white horse into a little namilet about a mile and a half from Greek George's. About the same time a person answering the same description, who subsequently proved to be Vasquez, led his lorse to water from where it was staked, near Greek George's, and then restaked at and re-entered the house. In the meantame three mounted men had ridden off in the direction oi Los Angeles. It is unnecessary to further detail these movements observed by Mitchell further than to say that they led Johnson and himself to decide that it was necessary to half himself to decide that it was necessary to a living of the leaders of the team unhitched, and they were directed to remain stationary until further orders, the object being simply to prevent their reporting the presence of an armed party in the canyon with a wagon, and were haited, the trates of the leaders of the team unhitched, and the

the house, several of his men were there, and that we

SHOULD HAVE A DESPERATE FIGHT against the odds of men equally well armed and lying concealed in the mustard thicket. Johnson immediately determined to utilize the unoffending
Mexicans whom we had stopped in the canyon.
They were compelled to turn their team around
and move to the rear of the mouth of the canyon.
There we left our horses, and Johnson, Harris, Hattley, Sam Bryant, Rodgers and myself packed ourselves in the wagon box, and the Mexicans were directed to drive the wagon directly to Greek George's. They were informed that the slightest disposition shown by them to give a signal or do anything contrary to orders would RESULT IN INSTAT DEATH.

It is unnecessary to say that they were docile.
It was about the most unpleasant ride I ever took.
The sides of the wagon box not teing very high, it was with great difficulty we could jam ourselves down so as to be concealed from view. Arriving at a point about 100 yards from the house and close to Vasquez's white horse—so near it that it was evident to our leaders and all of us that we could get to the horse-belore any one from the house could—we suddenly threw ourselves from the wagon tox and started for the house. The party, without formal orders, spread out right and left, like skirmishers, and, with heads bowed low,
PLUNGED INTO THE MUSTARD THICKET

and lett, axe skirmisners, and, with heads bowed low,
PLUNGED INTO THE MUSTARD THICKET
and moved rapidly and as silently as possible toward the nouse. Sam Bryant was about the centre of the line, and I hastened to his side, pushing through the weeds toward the house. Reaching the house, Bryant asked me to remain at the northwest angle and gnard the two north windows and the west side of the house. I cannot just now give every man's position, as at that particular juncture I was regarding those two windows and the west side of the house with very particular interest. A lew moments elapsed and I heard the sound of a door burst in; a second later

later

A RIFLE OR PISTOL SHOT,
and my interest in the affair became intense. I knew I could hear any approach to the two windows, and suddenly divining, from what I understood of the position of our party, that any attempt to escape in the direction of the white horse would probably be undertaken by the west side of the house, I took a step to the right, and the monent I did so discovered a bareheaded Mexican in he act of bounding toward me.

the house, I took a step to the right, and the moment I did so discovered a bareheaded Mexican in the act of bounding toward me.

I saw him throw up his hands, and those of our party to the right and from behind rusned upon him, and two or three other shots were fired. I confined my immediate attention to preparing for another shot, expecting a general fight, and thinking proper to maintain the position I held and still watch the windows. A few moments later it seemed probable that we had no more enemies to contend with, and I moved around to the sast side, and Vasquez and Lebrado, sometimes called Corova, were there, Vasquez beliebing, smilika AND EXPOSTULATING in a gentlemanly and excited manner. I handed my rifle to Harris, and taking a sheepskin from the top of a box, placed it in the shade in the inner angle of the house and led Vasquez to it, and, thanking me and smining, he lay down. I began examining his wounds and helping a Mexican woman to staunch the flow of blood. Johnson, and, in fact, every one of the party, did all in their power to make the man comfortable; but for some little time the expectation of an attack from the balance of his party was so great that particular attention could not be paid him.

How Vasquez was Taken.

Harris, it seems, burst in the kitchen door, which had been shut by Greek George's wile. Vasquez was eating his dinner, whonly unarmed, and there was no way for him to reach his arms without leaving the room by the very door Harris was entering. He sprang like a panther through an open window, only acoult eighteen inches square, and highted on his leet, intending to fee towards the willow thicket; but discovering his emenies springing towards him from that direction, he burried up the west side, as before stated, to get his horse.

willow thicket; but discovering his enemies springing towards him from that direction, he hurried up the west side, as before stated, to get his horse.

Vasquez is a remarkable man. While tooking for his wounds I placed my hand over his hearf, and found its pulsations gave no indication of excitement. His eye was bright, and there was a pleasant smile on his face and no tremor in his voice. He was polite and thankini for every attention. Supposing that he was fatally nurt I at first confined my attention entirely to assisting the women to bathe and bandage his wonnes, and therefore took little note of his expressions. I will give a lew, however, that will sume as examples, without trying to give his broken English. Although he thought and said that he was about to die—"Gone lip," as he expressed it—his expression of countenance was one of admiration of our determined attack and our good lick. "You are good men—good men." Some one said, "We are sorry to have had to wound you so, but it could not be helped," "It is not your fault," he replied; "I do not blame you. It was my own fault and there is no one to blame. I should not have attempted to escape." When first brought around the house, after the shooting, before I left my guard of the windows, iam informed that he claimed to be waiting for linen to blad up his wounds.

If found a dagger sticking in the floor on the left side of his bed, near the head; and about two leet from the loot, standing muzzle downward, a most beautiful rifle of the latest and best pattern; also a neat memorandum book, containing in one of the pockets a likeness of a little zirl and a lock of silken hair. Everything about his arms and person was in neat and perice order. His hair is jet black, without a sprinking of gray, and there are none of the wrinkles on his face one might expect to dind after the die he has led.

Vasquez was wounded in the head, also in the pockets a likenes of a little zirl and a lock of the latest the base led.

ANOTHER RAID INTENDED.

Vasquez stated to me that within four hours from the time of his capture he should have started to meother raid. One of the objective points, it is supposed, was a fight with Harry Morse's party.

I would like to give all the details, so that your readers could understand the whole situation; but we have

we have THE REST OF THE GANG to capture, and, having identified myself with the pursuers, I have not sent anything that might prejudice the next movement, which may occur at any moment. For some little time after Vasquez was shot he thought himself latally wounded, and white we were stanching his wounds he informed me that he had all along been possessed of MEANS OF ACCURATE INFORMATION in regard to the efforts being made to effect his capture. It is not intended now by those who propose to stay with the enterprise until the last member of the gang is captured that information shall be obtained so readily hereafter.

RUSSIAN EXPLORATION EAST.

Grand Duke Micholas' Expedition for the Exploration of the Oxus. [St. Petersburg (May 3) correspondence of London

News.]
The despatch of the Russian expedition, under the orders of the Grand Duke Nicholas Coastanti-novitch, to explore the waters of the Lower Oxus and their surrounding localities excites much interest here. The latter have been hitherto shrouded in a good deal of mystery. Opinions in organization of the expedition; but for the rest of world such differences can scarcely have much significance. The observations to be made by the different sections into which the expedition is divided in the various branches of scientific inquiry will go far to settle important geographical questions. Still more, these labors may tend to a solution of the dim-cuities attaching to the navigation of that great line of water communication whose sources were first visited by the Englishman Wood. It is not for England, who has sacrificed so many of her sons in the path of geographical enterprise, to regard with jealousy a Russian expedition of this pature. England, engaged in the task of civilizing 200,000,000 of her Indian Empire, can display no carping spirit should kussian researches on the Qxus result in opening up communication with the beart of Asia, and in establishing a route by which commerce and the arts may cope with the barbarism and ignorance of those distant populations.

which commerce and the arts may cope with the barbarism and ignorance of those distant populations.

THE OBJECTS OF THE EXPEDITION

may be described in this wise. A close examination is to be made of the lower waters of the Syr Darya and Amu Darya, surveys of their branches and the adjacent localities are to be entered on and lines of levels from the one river to the other are to be taken. The delta of the Amu will be examined in the greatest detail and stations for meteorological observations will be established along its course. The geology of the adjacent districts, together with their flora and fauna, will be thoroughly explored, while in the ethnographic and statistical sections observations will be made on the population and its economic conditions, and the local archeology will not be forgotten. The navigation of the river will be examined to as great an extent as the political exigencies of the moment will allow, while subsidiary parties will investigate the country between the Caspian and the Aral, with a view to a solution of the question whether these seas did not originally form a single one. The well known dry bed of the ancient Oxus is to be thoroughly examined, as well as what may be called its continuation from the head of the existing deits in a northeasterly direction, toward the Syr Darya. These investigations, it is hoped, may throw light on the theory, recently promulgated, that in times ween the Caspian and Aral formed a single sea the Syr Darya (from the point where nowadays it spreads out in unheasthy marshes) took a southwesterly direction, passing by Khiva into the Caspian, near Krasnovodsk. That a full measure of success may attend the labors of the different sections under the able superintendence of colonel Stoletoff, of the staff, must be the wish of all interested in geographical enterprise and the advancement of humanity.

WHAT IS THE CAUSE, CLEMENCY OR COM-MERCIAL CALCULATION?

A London journal, of the 7th of May, speaking of the present condition of Poland and of the commercial interests or rivalries of Russia and Germany, says:- "A remarkable instance of a country in spite of recent political convulsions becoming rich and prosperous, beyond the most sanguine expectations, is afforded in the case of Poland. The most trustworthy evidence of this is given by the report of Consul General Mansfield which has just been made public. Polish fabrics of every kind are gradually driving out of the market, both for the kingdom itself and the Empire of Russia in general, a vast number of articles of inferior quality hitherto imported from Germany, and the industrial production for exportation into Russia is assuming very large proportions. In many cases the contractors can hardly meet the demands. Labor has risen in price in the same ratio, and active and intelligent hands find ready employment at a remuneration quite out of proportion with the price of living. The population is undergoing a steady increase, no emigration takes place for America or elsewhere, and the number of Israelites who run away to escape military service is more than counterbalanced by the return of exiles from Russia, Siberia and abroad, under the provisions of various imperial ammesties. The convention with Austria respecting the salt mines in Gallicia has terminated and the report points out that there will be a large opening for the Liverpool dealers in salt, which is well worthy the attention of those firms. They should be early in the field and acquire the business immediately before it can get into German hands. of every kind are gradually driving out of the

THE BUEZ CANAL

[From the Pall Mall Gazette, May 7.] The latest news from Alexandria gives fuller articulars as to the mode in which the Suez Canal difficulty was put an end to. M. De Lesseps' threat to shut up "ma maison," as he is said to have decribed the canal, was promptly responded to by the Khedive. Two steam frigates were immediately stationed at Suez, and two others were desately stationed at Suez, and two others were despatched from Alexandria, accompanied by a tug and transport laden with beacons, buoys, light apparatus and diving bells, to insure the navigation of the canal and lakes in case of obstruction or removal of the usual lights. General Stone was directed to superintend the land operations, and McKiliop Bey was placed in charge of the naval arrangements. Troops were sent to Suez and Port Said and Colonel Ward was sent to Ismalia, to which a body of regular cavality was commanded to proceed from their encampment in the Wady. It is now suggested that possibly M. de Lesseps wished to enjoy a good practical joke, but it has cost the Egyptians a good round sum and will not be appreciated at Cairc. The terms upon which the dufficulty has been settled are very variously given. "In Alexandria, it is said, M. de Lesseps has yielded everything, while in Port Said it is believed that he has carried everything before nim." If the latter account of the matters in dispute between M. de Lesseps and the commerce of the world, and serions difficulties yet remain to be adjusted before relations between these opposing interests can be looked on as satisfactorily and permanently settled." patched from Alexandria, accompanied by a tug
